Avinash Chauhan is a rising junior at USC studying Quantitative Biology, pursuing his master’s degree in Biomedical Engineering, and minoring in Classical Perspectives. In addition to serving as the President of Healthcare Technology and Analytics, Avinash conducts research at the Rohs Lab of Quantitative Biology and the Boone Fetter Clinic for Autism Treatment at the Children’s Hospital Los Angeles (CHLA). Eager to evolve novel approaches at the intersection of health and educational inequities, he works closely with Living Advantage, a 501(c)3 nonprofit addressing issues facing emancipated foster care youth, and he collaborates with incarcerated writers through Dornsife’s Prison Educational Project.

Beatrix Heard is a junior from Los Angeles, California double-majoring in Global Studies and Archaeology with a minor in Spanish. She is interested in the intersection of equitable development and cultural heritage, with a regional focus on Southern California, Mexico, and Central America.

Brandon Tran is a presidential scholarship recipient studying Political Science with a minor in Organizational Leadership and Management. He currently serves as the Senior VP of Civic Innovations at the Institute for Youth in Policy and aspires to become a management consultant following graduation. In his free time, he enjoys watching and playing sports, movies and TV shows, and writing.

Cynthia Chockalingam is from Indiana, right outside Chicago, double-majoring in International Relations and NGOS & Social Change—with a minor in Justice, Voice, & Advocacy. She currently works at a South Asian nonprofit on anti-hate and advocacy work while also interning at a law firm, working with asylum seekers and refugees; as President of USC’s Foreign Service Society, she wants to bridge the gap between local action and international advocacy. Consequently, she is interested in policy work for her future.
Emily Briscoe is a senior studying Environmental Engineering. She is a student leader in sustainability at USC and is very passionate about developing and implementing impactful solutions that address climate change. She looks forward to the mentorship and skill-building provided by the BSEL Undergraduate Social Impact Scholars Program to continue advancing sustainability and to accomplish large-scale social impact.

Clarissa Rosales is a junior from Los Angeles, CA majoring in Legal Studies and double minoring in Social Work and Juvenile Justice and Nonprofits, Philanthropy, and Volunteerism. She is a devoted advocate for immigrant rights, as she herself comes from a Guatemalan immigrant household. Clarissa is committed to serving the undocumented immigrant community through legal representation and ultimately immigration reform to create a more just and humane system to aid the most vulnerable members of society.

Naomi Tanaka is a rising senior from Chula Vista, California majoring in Economics. Through the 2022 Obama-Chesky Voyager Scholarship, Naomi is currently researching guaranteed income programs and how aid during the COVID-19 pandemic can help inform the future of welfare programs. Her ultimate goal is to utilize her intersecting interests of both economics and politics to establish a social safety-net in the United States.

Noah Torres is a rising Senior studying Real Estate Development at USC. He is half Salvadoran, he speaks Spanish and French, and loves to backpack through new countries and visit new cities. Professionally, the ingredients of the career he hopes to forge are social impact, real estate development, economic development, and a dash of stylistic flare.

Liv Bohler is a rising junior from Louisville, Kentucky, studying Communication and Political Organizing in the Digital Age at USC. She is passionate about increasing civic engagement among youth and the presence of local media in America’s news deserts. On campus, Liv is involved in VoteSC, Alpha Phi Omega, and The Volunteer Center.
Rajyk Bhala is a rising junior at USC double majoring in Spanish and Health and Human Sciences with a double minor in Natural Sciences and Healthcare Studies. Rajyk is proud to be the co-President of USC Science Outreach and the Parent Liaison for Teach For Los Angeles, and he also conducts aging research in The Benayoun Lab at the Leonard Davis School of Gerontology. His ultimate goal is to pursue a career in medicine, where he hopes to address the financial gaps currently plaguing our healthcare system while providing the highest level of patient care.

Sammie Sorsby-Jones is a senior at USC majoring in Law, History, and Culture with a minor in Gender Studies. Her involvements at USC include being the founder and former president of the Survivor Support Community as well as teaching Supreme Court caselaw as an Issue Lead for the Southern California Moot Court Team in the Fall 2022 season, during which her Legal Brief placed 2nd in the nation. She is also a Warren Bennis Scholar and an LSAT Tutor for Blueprint Test Preparation. She is very passionate about traveling and photography, passions which she developed during her semester abroad in Milan, Italy.

Sean McCalla is a senior studying Business Administration passionate about creating sustainability solutions that generate shared value for firms and their stakeholders. He works on USC’s Assignment: Earth sustainability framework, where he is interested in positioning students as leaders of sustainability initiatives and storytelling about the climate crisis.